I do know that they are revising (revised?) the protocols from what I see by email traffic....I know that our MDHHS/GCHD EBL investigators or going without flushing and using large mouth bottles as well. I will check on the retesting of prior tests...

Interesting - probably more paint or additive at that level. do you know if the state/city/county water sampling for these investigations is now being done as recommended by EPA? Are they going to go back to repeat the water sampling on the cases that was done with the wrong process (flushing, narrow opening bottles, etc).
