Let's see how firm these reports become over the next few weeks. If Patti and Yan develop the code its possible these efforts could be turned over to Martha et al by the end of this year.

Martha,

I don't have an update for you yet, but Corinne and I discussed how best to handle both the move of the CLPPP staff and the need to provide surveillance assistance for the city of Flint situation.

For now, Patti McKane will provide the epi support with the assistance of one of her staff. That means she will be working with Bob to understand the data flow and will be pulling the data to support our reporting efforts. We'll reconsider having Junaid work on the lead data in February or March when we re-evaluate the move and decide whether or not to make it permanent.

I understand that to provide oversight you need to get into the work that CLPPP staff do on a day-to-day basis, but we really need to move carefully in the current situation. The move is not even effective until Monday and I doubt it will be possible to meet this week. The city of Flint crisis is exerting pressures that would not normally exist. If, as you voiced yesterday, you have reservations about supervising Bob and Jessica under these conditions, I'll supervise them myself for now and we'll reconsider their placement when we decide if they're staying in DEH.

Linda

I'd like to meet with them today or tomorrow to talk about logistics of the move. Can you let me know when it is OK to contact them?
