Please find the document attached. Still debating if the map is a good idea because it's really too small to do what I was imagining on it. My thought it was could color code it to reflect changes in blood level tests, but Kory brought up the good point that the colors would then be changing from week to week depending on testing rather than trends.

Could replace it with a table of zip codes and tests by zip code if they decide that's important or something else...

Executive Summary topics are placeholders. Can update to capture what they want...
