Dennis, Bill and John

For what it is worth, I would look at having flint spilt off the water system into some kind of regional authority and separate the finances from the general city if you are going to move forward with kiragani. The city has a propensity to use the water system as a cash cow and it will help them avoid that problem in the future.

Thanks

Good Afternoon,

If you think it makes sense, it might be worthwhile to get together and discuss the Orr situation and how you want me to interact with him. I have been working with Ernst and Young in Detroit for the last month or two on restructuring issues.

Thanks

Eric
