Greetings, Rona ...

Just got back from Flint. Various versions of this Q came up during today's presser. I would recommend you take a listen.

State was following all nationally set standards and protocols for testing, and has some of the most dedicated and professional drinking water and public health experts in the country working off the best information available at the time. We have acted quickly and took detailed concrete actions steps as new information and data came in.

WWJ's Zahra Huber spoke with Professor Marc Edwards from Virginia Tech regarding his thoughts on the Flint Water situation as the lead researcher on the project and he had very harsh words about how the Flint Water situation had been handled. He said federal laws had been broken when the switch was made away from the Detroit River to the Flint River and that data was manipulated to show that Flint water was safe when it was not. Can we get a comment from the Governor on this interview? I've attached the audio, uncut, for you to listen to for comment.

Let us know. Thanks!
